

Inside The Opioid Crisis: The Role of Mental Health Clinicians

The statistics behind the opioid crisis in the United States compel action from legislative, medical, and psychological stakeholders. This seminar will summarize the history of how we came to this point in the epidemic and reveal what steps (some effective, some misguided) have been taken so far to remedy the tragic outcomes. We will examine our own personal biases toward this heated topic that might influence both how we interpret data trends and also impact our rapport when treating patients with addictive behaviors. We will explore how psychologists and other mental health professionals can assist individuals with Opioid Use Disorder through research, risk assessment, behavioral support for substance abuse recovery programs, therapeutic interventions for chronic pain to minimize opioid use, community education, and patient/professional advocacy. Links to additional resources and book/wookbook recommendations will be provided.
